To See, To Know...
The Pine Hill Mill Region

Wilcox County is located in the Southwestern Black Belt of Alabama. The Black Belt is named for the rich black soil that grew superior cotton during the 19th century. The collapse of the plantation economy during the Civil War left a legacy of “soul food” cooking, art fashioned from found materials, vast stretches of pristine river bottom land and, more recently, the Civil Rights Movement.

Wilcox County is also well-known for its numerous outdoor opportunities. The rural landscape boasts an impressive selection of game animals, including whitetail deer, wild turkeys, feral hogs, squirrels, rabbits, ducks, doves and geese. The county has more miles of riverfront than any other county in Southwestern Alabama.

Roland Cooper State Park

Located six miles northeast of Camden, Roland Cooper State Park features spacious vacation cottages; a modern campground with bathhouse, laundry and camp store; and a scenic picnic area with tables, grills, pavilions and comfort station. Also, the park has a nine-hole golf course – 3,300 yards, par 36, with all the challenges and hazards of a championship course – as well as a driving range.
